Notes for November 4

The readers which have loyally stuck with FOCUS/Midwest for its nearly two decades of publishing are the type which not only vote but studiously follow the returns with pencil in hand making their own predictions. The election chart on pages 8 and 9 should come in handy.

If you have yet to decide for which representatives and senators you should vote, our up-to-date descriptions of key votes in the U.S. House and U.S. Senate may be of some service. While we have endorsed candidates from time to time, we have confidence in our readers making up their own minds.

However, we would like to discuss briefly several issues which will be on the ballot in Missouri and Illinois.

ILLINOIS: Illinois voters will decide whether to continue their present, unique system of cumulative voting for members of the Illinois House. Writing in Illinois Issues, Charles R. Bernardini succinctly summarizes arguments for retaining the present system: a smaller House with single-member districts would limit the amount of minority representation (women, racial, geographic, and issue-based), it would limit political diversity, and it would entrench the dominant political interests even firmer. The counter-argument that trimming the legislature would be more economical and more efficient (and this is heatedly contested), reduces democracy to the concerns we may have for a profit and loss account. No one ever claimed that a more democratic form of government must be efficient or economic. If that reasoning is accepted, then Illinois may want to copy some of the really "efficient" regimes where even voting is considered an unnecessary expense.

MISSOURI A simple majority will be sufficient to pass any of the following proposed amendments.

FOCUS/Midwest takes no stand on Amendment No. 3 which legalizes bingo. At this time, Missouri is one of 11 states which do not permit bingo for profit.

Amendment No. 4 gives the Conservation Commission the authority to pay the equivalent of property taxes to counties for the land the Commission buys for wildlife projects. FOCUS/Midwest endorses this amendment.

Amendment No. 5 is the Missouri version of California's proposition 13. It should be soundly defeated. The Amendment is so full of shortcomings that most officials of suburban municipalities, usually rather conservative, are opposing Amendment No. 5. Indeed, under certain conditions, Missourians may have to pay more under the provisions of the Amendment.

Illinois

SENATE

Incumbent. Adlai E. Stevenson, D, 50, of Hanover, elected to an unexpired term in 1970 and re-elected in 1974 with 62.2 percent. Stevenson is not seeking another term.

Democrat. Secretary of State Alan J. Dixon, 53, of Belleville.

Republican. Lt. Gov. David C. O'Neal, 43, of Belleville.

Others. Charles F. Wilson, Communist, of Chicago; Burton Lee Artz, Socialist Workers, of Chicago; Michael Soriano, Workers World, of Chicago; Bruce Green, Libertarian, of South Elgin; Sidney Lens, Citizens Party, of Chicago.

Outlook. Democrats are attempting to hold Stevenson's seat with one of their biggest vote getters. In Dixon's two races for the secretary of state's office — in 1976 and 1978 — he led the Democratic ticket, winning his 1978 race with a phenomenal 73.8 percent of the vote.

But Democrats worry that Dixon will be perceived as a lightweight when it comes to national and international issues. Practically all his adult life has been devoted to parochial Illinois politics, first as a state legislator from 1951 to 1971, then as state treasurer from 1971 to 1977 and then as secretary of state. Whether his personal popularity in those posts can be transferred to a U.S. Senate race remains a question.

Dixon has tried to counter this possible weak point by studying the issues, holding press conferences and agreeing to a series of debates with O'Neal. Earlier in the year, he was criticized for a poor performance at a press conference. But now that he has worked at being better informed, he hopes to demonstrate his ability to function as an effective and informed senator.

Dixon has the unified support of the otherwise feuding Democratic factions in the state. While allied with the party organization, he has always maintained a certain distance that has contributed to an image of independence.

But he is concerned about party turnout. With the death of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley (1955-76) in late 1976, the Democratic bastion in that city began a series of feuds that may result in a smaller vote than in Daley's reign.

In contrast to Dixon, O'Neal has had a relatively short political career. A pharmacist in Belleville, O'Neal became enraged in the late 1960s when a call to the sheriff's office brought a response three days later. So he ran for St. Clair County sheriff himself, won, and served from 1970 to 1977. He gained a reputation for honesty, hard work and dedication to duty. In 1976, he won the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor and was elected on a joint ticket with the popular Gov. James B. Thompson. They were re-elected in 1978 when Illinois switched its gubernatorial election from presidential to non-presidential years.

Although Illinois' number two official, O'Neal suffers from the usual obscurity of being lieutenant governor. He won the Senate nomination in March after the favorite, state Attorney General William J. Scott, became bogged down in a long trial on income tax evasion charges.

O'Neal attempted to shore up his name identity with a series of late summer television commercials introducing himself and his background to the voters. The ads apparently made some impact, but observers doubt whether people really were focusing on politics at the time.

Alan J. Dixon

A late September poll commissioned by three Illinois television stations put O'Neal within 8.3 percentage points of Dixon — 45.6 percent for Dixon to 37.3 percent for O'Neal, with 16.7 percent undecided.

O'Neal is campaigning aggressively, presenting himself as a non-politician in contrast to Dixon's long political career.

O'Neal has tried to move toward the middle of the political spectrum. He has criticized as "idiocy" the GOP platform plank opposing the 55 mph speed limit and expressed doubts about the plank advocating that any new federal judges be opposed to abortion.

Anderson's presidential candidacy may help Dixon by drawing out liberals who might not otherwise vote. A majority of them probably would choose Dixon over O'Neal. Dixon's personal popularity and high name recognition, plus his effort to show himself as a substantive candidate, seem to have kept him in the lead, but O'Neal is within striking distance. Leans Democratic.

HOUSE DISTRICTS

1 (Chicago — South Side)

Candidates. State Sen. Harold Washington, D, 58, of Chicago; George Williams, R, of Chicago.

Outlook. Washington defeated Rep. Bennett M. Stewart, 65, in the Democratic primary. Stewart, a Chicago alderman, was selected by a Democratic congressional district committee in 1978 to replace the late Democratic Rep. Ralph Metcalfe (1971-78) on the ballot after the latter's death on Oct. 10, 1978. But Stewart did not have the political strength to hold the seat on his own and ran a poor third in this year's primary.

Washington, who is black, has been an anti-organization state senator and received backing from supporters of Metcalfe as well as the liberal white community around the University of Chicago. Safe Democratic.

2 (Chicago — South Side)

Candidates. Gus Savage, D, 54, a Chicago newspaper editor and publisher; Marsha A. Harris, R, 25, a Chicago nurse.

Outlook. Savage won the Democratic nomination to replace the retiring Democratic Rep. Morgan F. Murphy, 48, of Chicago, a veteran of 10 years in the House. Savage is a black newspaperman who has been a political gadfly for years in South Side Chicago politics. He was defeated in 1968 and 1970 U.S. House primaries. But now he will have a chance to represent this heavily Democratic district with a growing population of blacks. Safe Democratic.

3 (Chicago — Southwest suburbs)

Candidates. Incumbent Marty Russo, D, 36, of South Holland, elected to a third term in 1978 with 65.2 percent of the vote; Lawrence C. Sarsoun, R, 39, a commodity broker from Midlothian.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

4 (Chicago suburbs — south and southwest)

Candidates. Incumbent Edward J. Derwinski, R, 54, of Flossmoor, elected to an 11th term in 1978 with 66.9 percent of the vote; Richard S. Jalovec, D, 40, an attorney from Burr Ridge.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

5 (Chicago — central)

Candidates. Incumbent John G. Fary, D, 69, of Chicago, elected to a second full term in 1978 with 84 percent of the vote; Robert V. Kotowski, R, 49, a plastics company foreman from Chicago.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

6 (Cook County — northwest suburbs)

Candidates. Incumbent Henry J. Hyde, R, 56, of Bensenville, elected to a third term in 1978 with 66.2 percent of the vote; Mario R. Reda, D, 40, of River Forest, a professor at the College of DuPage.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

7 (Chicago — Downtown, West Side)

Candidates. Incumbent Cardiss Collins, D, 49, of Chicago, elected to a third full term in 1978 with 86.3 percent of the vote; Ruth R. Hooper, R, 55, a Chicago housewife.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

8 (Chicago — north central)

Candidates. Incumbent Dan Rostenkowski, D, 52, of Chicago, elected to an 11th term in 1978 with 86.0 percent of the vote; Walter F. Zilke, R, 75, of Chicago.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

9 (Chicago — northeast, Lake Shore)

Candidates. Incumbent Sidney R. Yates, D, 71, of Chicago, elected to a 15th non-consecutive term in 1978 with 75.3 percent of the vote; John D. Andrica, R, 34, a Chicago management consultant.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

10 (Cook County — northern suburbs)

Candidates. Incumbent John E. Porter, R, 45, of Evanston, elected in a special election Jan. 22, 1980, with 54.5 percent of the vote; Robert A. Weinberger, D, 36, an attorney from Glencoe.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

11 (Chicago — Northwest)

Candidates. Incumbent Frank Annunzio, D, 65, of Chicago, elected to an eighth term in 1978 with 73.7 percent of the vote; Michael R. Zanello, R, 26, of Chicago, a systems programmer.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

12 (Outer Chicago suburbs — Arlington Heights)

Candidates. Incumbent Philip M. Crane, R, 49, of Mt. Prospect, elected to a fifth full term in 1978 with 79.5 percent of the vote; David McCartney, D, 57, a high school principal from Kildeer.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

13 (Northeast — Elgin, Waukegan)

Candidates. Incumbent Robert McClory, R, 72, of Lake Bluff, elected to a ninth term in 1978 with 61.2 percent of the vote; Michael Reese, D, a businessman from Elgin.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

14 (Outer Chicago suburbs — DuPage County)

Candidates. Incumbent John N. Erlenborn, R, 53, of Glen Ellyn, elected to an eighth term in 1978 with 75.1 percent; LeRoy E. Kennel, D, 50, of Lombard, a professor of communications at Bethany Theological Seminary.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

15 (North central — Aurora, DeKalb)

Candidates. Incumbent Tom Corcoran, R, 41, of Ottawa, elected to a second term in 1978 with 62.4 percent of the vote; John Paul Quillin, D, 55, a health care consultant from Seneca.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

16 (Northwest — Rockford, Freeport)

Candidates. State Sen. Lynn M. Martin, R, 40, of Rockford; Winnebago County Treasurer Douglas R. Aurand, D, 39, of Rockford.

Outlook. Martin seems to have a clear lead to take the seat of Republican Rep. John B. Anderson, 58, of Rockford, who is running for president as an independent. Martin won the Republican nomination easily, capturing nearly half the vote in a field of four strong candidates.

Martin has had a rapid rise in local politics. A former teacher in the Rockford schools, Martin served as a member of the governing board of Winnebago County from 1972 to 1976. She was elected to the Illinois House in 1976 and to the state Senate in 1978.

Aurand is trying hard to catch Martin but has had trouble getting both money and public attention. A series of debates has been scheduled that should help Aurand gain a higher profile. He is generally centrist to conservative and is close to the party organization and organized labor. He supports a strong military and efforts to combat inflation.

Martin is conservative on most issues, although she supports ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. She has supported the opening of a nuclear power plant that has been built in the area, while Aurand has wanted to make sure the nuclear waste disposal problem was solved before the plant went into operation. Republican favored.

17 (Northeast — Joliet, Kankakee)

Candidates. Incumbent George M. O'Brien, R, 63, of Joliet, elected to a fourth term in 1978 with 70.6 percent of the vote; Michael A. Murer, D, 37, a Joliet attorney.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

18 (West central — Peoria, Pekin)

Candidates. Incumbent Robert H. Michel, R, 57, of Peoria, elected to a 12th term in 1978 with 65.9 percent of the vote; John L. Knuppel, D, 57, a lawyer and farmer from Havana.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

19 (West — Moline, Rock Island)

Candidates. Incumbent Tom Railsback, R, 48, of Moline, elected to a seventh term in 1978 without opposition; Thomas J. Hand, D, 55, a millwright from Fulton.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

20 (West — Springfield, Quincy)

Candidates. Incumbent Paul Findley, R, 59, of Pittsfield, elected to a 10th term in 1978 with 69.6 percent of the vote; former state Rep. David L. Robinson, D, 32, a Springfield businessman.

Outlook. This should be the most bitterly fought House race in Illinois this year. Findley, a veteran of 20 years in the House, has become a champion of American contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). He claims such contacts would enhance the chances for peace in the Middle East. Findley serves on the House Foreign Affairs Committee and has spent a good deal of time working on Middle Eastern affairs. The American Jewish community has been upset by his position and has contributed funds to Robinson.

However, Findley also serves on another panel, the House Agriculture Committee, that is important for his agriculturally-oriented district in west central Illinois. The congressman has emphasized that he is the third ranking Republican on the committee and is in a much better position to help his constituents than a freshman.

Findley has shied away from debates, although he has agreed to one on Oct. 26. Robinson is using that issue against him, saying Findley finds time to talk to PLO leader Yasir Arafat but not to debate in his own district.

Robinson, who is Jewish, was so upset by Findley's contacts with the PLO that it became one of the reasons he decided to run, and he has made it a major campaign issue. He continually refers to the PLO as "Soviet-backed terrorists." He argues that Findley's contacts with them show he is out of touch with the district, a theme pursued by Findley's primary opponent earlier this year.

Robinson had a generally liberal voting record in the Illinois Legislature where he served from 1977 to 1979, but he is downplaying that label. He has taken a strong anti-abortion position, criticizing Findley for opposing the Hyde amendment in 1977 and for supporting amendments that would liberalize the conditions under which the federal government could pay for abortions. This could be a potent issue in a district with a sizable Catholic population.

Local observers give Findley a slight advantage because of his incumbency and personal popularity. Leans Republican.

21 (Central—Champaign, Urbana)

Candidates. Incumbent Edward R. Madigan, R, 44, of Lincoln, elected to a fourth term in 1978 with 78.3 percent of the vote; Penny Severns, D, 28, an industrial worker from Decatur.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

22 (Southeast — Danville)

Candidates. Incumbent Daniel B. Crane, R, 44, of Danville, elected to a first term in 1978 with 54 percent of the vote; Peter M. Voelz, D, 39, a journalism professor from Paris.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

23 (Southwest — East St. Louis)

Candidates. Incumbent Melvin Price, D, 75, of East St. Louis, elected to an 18th term in 1978 with 74.2 percent of the vote; Ronald L. Davinroy, R, 41, a sales manager from O'Fallon.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

24 (South — Carbondale)

Candidates. Incumbent Paul Simon, D, 51, of Carbondale, elected to a third term in 1978 with 65.6 percent of the vote; John T. Anderson, R, 56, a public relations management consultant from Marion; James H. Barrett, Constitution Party of Illinois, of Valer.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

SENATE

Democrat. Incumbent Thomas F. Eagleton, 51, of University City, elected to a second term in 1974 with 60.1 percent of the vote.

Republican. St. Louis County Executive Gene McNary, 45, of Sunset Hills.

Socialist Workers: Martha Pettit, of Kansas City, an unemployed autoworker.

Outlook. Eagleton has tempered his liberalism since his election to the Senate in 1968 and is in a good position to hold off McNary's conservative challenge.

Nevertheless, McNary denounces the senator as a free-spending liberal who has voted to weaken America's defense. The Republican is particularly critical of Eagleton's vote for the Panama Canal treaties and his support for the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union.

To neutralize the charges, Eagleton stresses his support of public works projects for Missouri — completion of the Inner Belt highway and renovation of the Old Post Office in St. Louis and preservation of Union Station and re-roofing of the Kemper Arena in Kansas City.

On another front, the senator poses as a bureaucratic gadfly in his criticism of the Energy Department. He has berated the department for neglecting development of new energy sources. And this summer, the Senate passed an Eagleton-sponsored amendment cutting the department's work force by 1,000.

This is McNary's second try for statewide office. In 1972, he lost the GOP gubernatorial primary, scoring only 16 percent against Christopher S. Bond who went on to win the election. But the challenger is well known in St. Louis County, which is predominantly Republican and casts the largest number of votes in the state. McNary has held elective office there since 1966.

To increase his name recognition outside his base, the Republican is running an expensive television ad campaign across the state.

Stressing his experience in county government, McNary says he wants to go to Washington to stop the encroachment of federal power on local governments. He believes federal aid to localities should be limited to revenue-sharing funds and money for private sector job-training programs.

Illustrative of his dislike for federal regulations is a long-running battle between McNary and the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) over release of the county's 1979-80 community development block grant funds.

HUD held up some of the funds, arguing that the county had been too slow to develop low- and middle-income subsidized housing. But the county objected to the strings HUD had attached to release of the money and filed suit in federal court. Eventually the county got half the money, but the other half is still in dispute.

Eagleton has criticized McNary for failing to cooperate with HUD to provide adequate housing for low- and moderate-income people.

One liability plaguing Eagleton is a family problem that has become very public. On Aug. 4, the day before the Democratic primary, Eagleton announced that he had been the victim of an extortion attempt by his niece, Elizabeth Weigand, 23, and her attorney, Stephen E. Poludniak, 29. They had threatened to release damaging information about him unless he or the family business, Missouri Pipe Fittings Co., bought her 6.25 percent of the company stock for $220,000.

Eagleton refused, saying he thought she would give the money to the Church of Scientology, of which she is a member. The church has denied any involvement.

The senator denied that any damaging information existed. When the pair was arrested in August, the FBI seized a briefcase from Poludniak.

On Sept. 9, a federal grand jury indicted Weigand and Poludniak for attempted extortion and they were found guilty on Oct. 24.

To be successful this fall, McNary must run well in his St. Louis County base. Eagleton, however, also is from the St. Louis area, and in his 1974 Senate race carried the city and county by nearly 112,000 votes.

McNary is not well-known in the state's other major metropolitan area, Jackson County (Kansas City). In 1974, Eagleton received more than two-thirds of the Jackson County vote, and he holds an advantage there.

A pre-primary poll in mid-summer showed Eagleton leading McNary by 2-1. McNary's criticisms of Eagleton and his media barrage will doubtlessly improve his standing, but even a large margin for McNary around St. Louis County will probably not offset Eagleton's strength statewide. Democrat favored.

GOVERNOR

Democrat. Incumbent Joseph P. Teasdale, 44, of Jefferson City, elected in 1976 with 50.2 percent of the vote.

Republican. Former Gov. Christopher S. (Kit) Bond (1973-77), 41, of Kansas City.

Socialist Workers. Helen Savio, 58, of St. Louis, a teacher.

Outlook. In 1976, Bond's overconfidence was a major factor in his loss to Teasdale. This rematch is an opportunity for Teasdale to prove that his victory four years ago was not a fluke.

Teasdale is using the advantage of incumbency to stress the theme that his administration is a friend of the average citizen.

When several illegal chemical dumps were discovered in the state, Teasdale responded to citizens' complaints by calling a special session of the Legislature to address the problem.

During the July heat wave, the governor called out the National Guard to aid the elderly and later asked the Legislature for funds to help the poor, elderly and handicapped pay their cooling bills.

In several instances, the governor has stepped in to mediate local labor disputes. He helped settle a 1978 teachers' strike in St. Louis by providing $1.4 million in state money for pay raises. His threat to impose martial law induced Kansas City firefighters and city officials to resolve a strike.

Bond belittles Teasdale's call for the special legislative session as an example of publicity-seeking opportunism. The former governor claims that before the issue of hazardous wastes surfaced in the press, Teasdale advocated cutting the budget of the state department that conducts waste site inspections.

Teasdale flies often in a state airplane to "meet the governor" forums throughout Missouri. He justifies the travel expense by saying that the people have a right to talk face-to-face with their governor.

Christopher S. (Kit) Bond

Bond says Teasdale's reckless spending and budget requests will squander the state's $250 million surplus and necessitate a tax increase.

Bond criticizes Teasdale for not fulfilling his 1976 campaign pledge to stem increases in utility rates. To counter charges that he is out of touch with the common man, the wealthy Bond has proposed an aid package for the elderly that would grant them a sales tax exemption on food purchases and discounts on other items.

Bond may benefit from Teasdale's image as a poor administrator. During Teasdale's term, several heads of government departments left their jobs and accused the governor of incompetence.

Such incidents, combined with Teasdale's generally poor relations with the Democratic-controlled Legislature, have provoked some party members to desert Teasdale and start a pro-Bond movement among Democrats and independents. No clear favorite.

HOUSE DISTRICTS

1 (North St. Louis and western suburbs)

Candidates. Incumbent William Clay, D, 49, of St. Louis, elected to a sixth term in 1978 with 66.6 percent of the vote; Bill White, R, 46, a St. Louis businessman.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

2 (St. Louis suburbs)

Candidates. Incumbent Robert A. Young, D, 56, of Maryland Heights, elected to a second term in 1978 with 56.4 percent of the vote; John O. Shields, R, 54, of St. Louis County, a financial planning consultant.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

3 (South St. Louis and suburbs)

Candidates. Incumbent Richard A. Gephardt, D, 39, of St. Louis, elected to a second term in 1978 with 81.9 percent of the vote; Robert A. Cedarburg, R, 52, of St. Louis County, an attorney.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

4 (West — Kansas City, Independence)

Candidates. Incumbent Ike Skelton, D, 48, of Lexington, elected to a second term in 1978 with 72.8 percent; Bill Baker, R, 66, of Lee's Summit, a real estate broker.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

5 (Kansas City)

Candidates. Incumbent Richard Bolling, D, 64, of Kansas City, elected to a 16th term in 1978 with 72 percent; ex-state Sen. Vincent E. Baker, R, 59, of Kansas City.

Outlook. Safe Democratic.

6 (Northwest — St. Joseph)

Candidates. Incumbent E. Thomas Coleman, R, 37, of Kansas City, elected to a second term in 1978 with 55.9 percent of the vote; former state Rep. Vernon King, D, 56, of Excelsior Springs.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

7 (Southwest — Springfield)

Candidates. Incumbent Gene Taylor, R, 52, of Sarcosie, elected to a fourth term in 1978 with 61.2 percent of the vote; Ken Young, D, 57, of Point Lookout, a retired teacher.

Outlook. Safe Republican.

8 (Central — Columbia, Jefferson City)

Candidates. State Rep. Steve Gardner, D, 32, of Ellisville; state Rep. Wendell Bailey, R, 40, of Willow Springs.

Outlook. Democratic Rep. Richard H. Ichord is retiring after 20 years in the House, and the Republican Bailey may claim votes from some who in the past have favored Ichord's conservative voting habits.

Bailey opposes gun control, the Equal Rights Amendment and the busing of school children to achieve racial integration. He calls the SALT II treaty "a delusion and a sham" and wants to stop "social engineering" by federal agencies like the Occupational Safety and Health Administration and the Environmental Protection Agency.

He supports the Kemp-Roth tax cut proposal, thinks a constitutional amendment may be necessary to balance the federal budget and opposes government aid to financially-troubled businesses.

Gardner also is conservative on a number of issues. He opposes gun control and favors a constitutional amendment banning abortions. But he supports ERA ratification, opposes a balanced-budget constitutional amendment and once voted against the death penalty in the Legislature.

Bailey is an auto dealer in the rural southern part of the district. He travels by van from town to town, and his homespun campaign style may cut into traditional Democratic strength in rural areas. In the Aug. 5 Republican primary, Bailey won his home base by more than 15-1 and carried 14 of the district's 19 counties.

But in most areas in the north of the district, Bailey is not so strong. Gardner leads in Boone County (Columbia), where the University of Missouri is located. And Gardner's home is in the populous St. Louis County end of the district.

If Gardner runs well in his home base and wins Boone County and a few other counties in the north-central part of the district, he may be able to offset Bailey's margin in the rural areas to the south.

Ichord has not endorsed his fellow-Democrat Gardner. Bailey's campaign claims that Ichord's fence-sitting is a clear signal that Bailey is the best candidate. Leans Republican.

9 (Northeast — Florissant)

Candidates. Incumbent Harold L. Volkmer, D, 49, of Hannibal, elected to a second term in 1978 with 74.7 percent of the vote; John W. Turner, R, 37, of Spanish Lake, a college professor who resigned his teaching post to run for Congress.

Outlook. The expansion of the St. Louis metropolitan area is exerting a Republican influence on this traditionally Democratic district.

Volkmer does not appear to be a particularly vulnerable incumbent. He won handily in 1978 and his moderate voting record has provoked few criticisms.

But there are a growing number of Republican voters in St. Charles County in the southern part of the district, and the party has a credible candidate in Turner, who holds a Ph.D. in economics.

In an attempt to expand his base beyond St. Charles County into the rural counties in the northeastern corner of the state, Turner charges that Volkmer does not place a high priority on farmers' needs.

Turner cites as evidence the fact that Volkmer relinquished a seat on the House Agriculture Committee.

Volkmer responds that in 1977 he sought and received temporary assignment to the Agriculture Committee after former Rep. Bob Bergland (1971-76) resigned to become Secretary of Agriculture. But at the beginning of the 96th Congress in 1979, Volkmer lost his temporary spot on Agriculture when all of the permanent seats were assigned to others.

Turner has tapped St. Louis County business interests for campaign contributions and claims his primary and general election spending will exceed $200,000.

Volkmer's budget is about half that, but he has been called an 'omnipresent' campaigner who tirelessly travels the district making public appearances.

Despite the influx of Republican voters into the southern part of the district, Volkmer's Marion County base remains the 9th District archetype. It is rural, agricultural and Democratic, like nearly all the counties in the district. Democrat favored.

10 (Southeast — Cape Girardeau, the Bootheel)

Candidates. Incumbent Bill D. Burlison, D, 45, of Cape Girardeau, elected to a sixth term in 1978 with 65.3 percent of the vote; Bill Emerson, R, 42, of DeSoto, a government relations consultant.

Outlook. Unfavorable publicity has dogged Burlison this year, and he may see some slippage in his re-election margin, which has been above 65 percent in his most recent elections.

The incumbent mailed letters to about 300 constituents requesting their vote and asking for help in distributing campaign materials. Enclosed with each letter was a $12 check to help defray their expenses.

The tactic is legal, but Burlison was criticized by some for trying to buy votes.

Local newspapers have hinted that Burlison used his influence this summer to get special treatment for Mrs. Letha Hance, a U.S. Postal Service worker in the district who was fired when she was suspected of falsifying records to cover a $2,000 shortage of postage stamps. After Burlison appealed to Postmaster General William F. Bolger on Hance's behalf, she was transferred to another postal job in St. Louis.

In September 1978, Mrs. Hance's estranged husband had accused the congressman of having an affair with his wife after Hance found Burlison and Mrs. Hance eating breakfast in her apartment. Burlison denied there was an affair, saying he was at Mrs. Hance's apartment with his wife's permission on a constituent assistance matter.

The Republican Emerson is a native of the district, although he has not lived there since he was a teen-ager. He served as a congressional aide to U.S. Rep. Bob Ellsworth of Kansas (1961-67) and then-Rep. Charles McC. Mathias Jr. of Maryland (1961-69) through much of the 1960s. He later worked as a government relations specialist with defense and energy-related private companies and in November returned to Missouri to run for Congress.

Emerson supports balancing the federal budget, heavier defense spending and an anti-abortion constitutional amendment. He charges that Burlison is an automatic vote for budget deficits and a weaker defense.

Burlison calls Emerson an outsider who as a congressman would be a lackey for his former employers, the defense and energy industries.

The incumbent defends his sympathy for pro-labor legislation and social initiatives by pointing to the substantial number of poor and blue-collar workers in the district.

Burlison reminds farmers that he is the second ranking Democrat on the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture.

Republican voters are spilling into the northern part of this district, which includes the outlying southern suburbs of St. Louis, but like the 9th District, most of southeast Missouri remains rural, agricultural and wedded to its Democratic tradition. Democrat favored.
